A RECOLLECTION OF WAR TIMES.

Rev. Kelsey Johnson, ward, D. D., died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Woodward, in Richmond, on the 19th instant. For the past ten years the deceased had been totally blind.

He was twice married, his first wife being Hannah Lee, daughter of the late Edmund L. Lee, of this city. He was in the 80th year of his age. Dr. Stewart was the victim of an indignity which was perpetrated upon him and a several hundred worshippers in St. Paul's Church in February, 1892, when the Eighth Illinois Cavalry regiment was performing duty in Alexandria.

The deceased was occupying the pulpit of that church on that memorable Sunday morning when an officer of that long-to-be-remembered regiment arose and demanded that Mr. Stewart conduct the services according to his belief—that is, pray for the President of the United States. The doctor kept on with the services, totally ignoring the strange demand and interruption, when the officer advanced and proceeded behind the railing, took the doctor in charge, calling at the time upon some of his subordinates who were with him to assist. The doctor was ordered to do his canonicals, which he refused to do, and was marched through the streets clothed as he was when officiating in the church. There was great indignation among the congregation and throughout the entire city when the affair was noted around. There was being published in the Gazette Office at the time a sheet about one-quarter of the size of the Gazette called "The Local News," designed to record the main local and national events of war times. The following Monday afternoon a description of the affair was printed in it. It was headed "An Outrage," and it was nothing more nor less. The same night the Gazette office was set on fire by some of the officers and men of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry and all of its contents were totally destroyed. All of us were compelled to be in their houses at ten o'clock at night and the office was at the mercy of the military. Years after the close of the war one of the survivors of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry wrote a history of that regiment in which the author described the arrest of Rev. Dr. Stewart and the burning of this office. The author virtually acknowledged that the idea of destroying the office and the carrying out of the plan was the work of his regiment.

A special certificate was awarded to J. W. Burke, who received First Division certificate in all his studies.

THE PRESIDENT IN ALEXANDRIA.

President Roosevelt, accompanied by General Wood and a private detective left the White House yesterday and drove to the wharf where the President, and the general boarded a ferry steamer for this city. The detective, who remained in Washington, informed the officers of the steamer of the fact that the President was aboard and pleasant suggestions that they look out for him.

Mr. J. B. Padgett, superintendent of the ferry line, was informed by telephone that the President and General Wood were in transit and would reach this city at 5 o'clock. This announcement was in turn telephoned to different places on King street, the thoroughfare over which the two would pass, and many persons were on the lookout for them. They left the boat in the lead of the other passengers and passed up King street. While there was nothing startling about a demonstration, much eagerness was displayed by many to get a look at the President. Officer Griffin was among those who were watching the rapid strides of the President and General Wood, when Mr. Roosevelt approached and inquired of him the most direct route to Arlington. The officer told him to turn into Washington street and after having left the Washington pike the point of the compass he should pursue to reach Arlington. The President and his companion followed the officer's directions and they soon left the city via the old canal basin. Several youngsters, when they learned the President was walking over the Washington pike, mounted on bicycles and proceeded in that direction. Some overtook the pedestrians, whom they reported as making rapid strides northward. They cut across the country some distance north of Alexandria returning to Washington by way of Arlington. So far as known this was Mr. Roosevelt's first visit to Alexandria, which city he on this occasion desired to embrace in one of his long walks.

A FAIR SPECIMEN.

Mr. William F. Carne, secretary of the Business Men's League of this city, receives numerous letters of inquiry from parties in other cities as to the advantages offered by Alexandria for manufacturing purposes. The correspondents are generally very careful to ask what inducements the city offers to parties contemplating removing their plants here. Of course this city has nothing to offer apart from its natural advantages, its river and railroad facilities, its proximity to the national capital, &c.

The following, received today, is a fair specimen of the communications. It is from Charles E. Groat, manufacturer of underwear and overalls, at Greenwich, N. Y.

"Dear Sir:—We intend moving our entire plant to another city in the near future. What inducements would you or the citizens of your city offer us? We employ about three hundred men, and have a large stock of goods on hand. Our business is very profitable, and we could employ one hundred additional persons if we moved. Our reasons for moving are our inability to secure enough operators, necessitating the higher rate of wages than mill located in larger cities, help being at a premium here, high priced fuel and high freight rates. There are five factories in this town giving more employment to labor than the town can supply. We have been forced to refuse orders for the past thirty days. Our daily running expenses average about one thousand dollars at present. We have a complete outfit of machinery, including a large steam engine, five feet high with a wooden addition one hundred and thirty feet by fifty feet. Two stories high, fitted throughout with the most modern machinery for the manufacture of underwear. Our machinery cost over $30,000, a very large portion of which we installed during the past three years. I should be pleased to submit any additional information, provided you are interested."

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The commencement exercises of the public schools were concluded this morning when the pupils of Hallowell School were dismissed for the session. The exercises were held in Roberts Chapel and were largely attended. The programme was as follows: Lord's prayer, led by Supt. Kemper; welcome address, by Martha Thompson; song, "Voices of Spring"; People Will Talk; Eliza Greer; What The Leaves Say; Little Lullaby; others; Look Up, Martha Johnson; song, Anchored; What Papa Doesn't Know, Kathleen Murray; Aunt Tabitha, Ollie Madell; The Advantages of a Good Education, Annie Chevis; Flower exercise, E. L. Lyles and others; solo by Josephine Clark; presentation of certificates and medals; song, Vacation; address by Superintendent; song, The Star Spangled Banner; benediction, by Rev. E. H. Robinson, treasurer of the William McKinley Industrial School. The Superintendent's medal was awarded to Esther Webb, and special mention in School No. 1 was made of Esther Webb, Mildred Chapman, E. L. Lyles, Annie Chevis, Mattie Price, Louise Madella.

FINE RAIN.

The cloudy weather of yesterday evening brought several light showers early in the night, but about four o'clock this morning there was a more copious downpour, accompanied by thunder and lightning. An hour later there was a tempest from a thick cloud which was wafted over the city from the south. Rain fell in torrents and some hailstones pelted the windows and the thunder at times came in heavy crashes. Considerable rain fell during the short time the tempest raged. In portions of some streets the roadways became canals. The sewers were taxed to their fullest capacity. The hail southwest of Alexandria was very severe, and country people who were on their way to this city and Washington when the storm broke had thrilling experiences. They say hailstones half as large as hen's eggs fell thick and fast, and that it was only by the greatest efforts their horses were prevented from running away. Between twelve and one o'clock today a heavy cloud formed in the west which was wafted over the city and another copious rain followed.

THE UNION DEPOT.

The probability that the House will amend the union railway station bill by fixing the site in Washington on O Street, near the present B. & O. station, makes the attitude of the Senate in the matter of extreme importance to those interested in the erection of the new station. The general sentiment in the District committee seems to be insistent on the Massachusetts avenue site, if it is possible to secure it, but it is not unlikely that the O Street location would be rejected rather than have the entire project fail.

THE MARKET.

There was an average Saturday morning display of country produce in market this morning. There was a weak tone in prices of vegetables, but the quotations for other articles were about unchanged. The country people were jubilant over the late rains in this vicinity.

IMPROVEMENTS AT FORT HUNT.

The bids for putting up the necessary wire and the installation of the electric lighting lamps necessary for the illumination of the grounds and quarters at Fort Hunt, was opened at the fort by the constructing quartermaster, Captain McManus, Tuesday, and the contract was later awarded to Mr. John Rau, of Washington. Captain McManus also opened proposals for the building of several miles of macadam roadway through the military reservation at Fort Washington, and Mr. Thomas H. Lyons, of Washington, was the successful bidder.

ACCIDENT TO A BRAKEMAN.

Mr. James O'Neal, a brakeman on the Washington Southern Railway, was painfully bruised in an accident at Quantico yesterday evening. He was at work making up a train at the time when an engine struck him while he was standing on a trestle over which he was passing. Fortunately he escaped serious injury. He was brought to his home in the northern part of the city last night.

DAMAGES AWARDED.

In the matter of the Southern Railway Company v. Susana P. A.
